

November 12 2008

Sound News for Industry

Kwinana Industries Council (KIC) welcomes the latest report on Cockburn Sound, which shows the massive improvements in industry's environmental performance over the last several years are paying dividends.

"The state of the Sound is vastly improved compared to its condition years ago and the study has again shown that industry is pulling its weight in being a good environmental performer," said KIC Director, Chris Oughton.

"To put it simply, there are some problems at the top end of the Sound, some problems at the bottom end and industry is the cleaner bit in the middle.

"The community, the regulators and industry all realized that the bad practices of the 70s had to end and as far as KIC member companies are concerned, they have.

"We have now moved to a point where one of the nation's heaviest industrial zones is working next to what the latest reports find to be a pretty clean body of water.

"We recognise there are still areas to be addressed on the overall issue of reducing industry's environmental footprint and we are working hard to achieve this."